

Europe over Christmas and New Year

Rob Morgan ARPS

In what may be described as a very expensive way to avoid a family Christmas, Lucy and I went on a river cruise (our first ever) from Budapest to Amsterdam. Well, that was the plan, but as the rivers were very high due to rain over the previous month or so, the middle one third of the cruise did not happen. This was an opportunity for about 5-10% of the passengers (all Australian) to whine and complain. Fortunately they left the rest of us before the second half began. The weather was mild, except for snow one day near the start and the usual Dutch winter weather at the end. But, as Gigi and Robin Williams pointed out in their presentation, what good is good weather to photographers?

Here are a few of my images from our trip.

On track in Vienna

Images by Rob Morgan ARPS

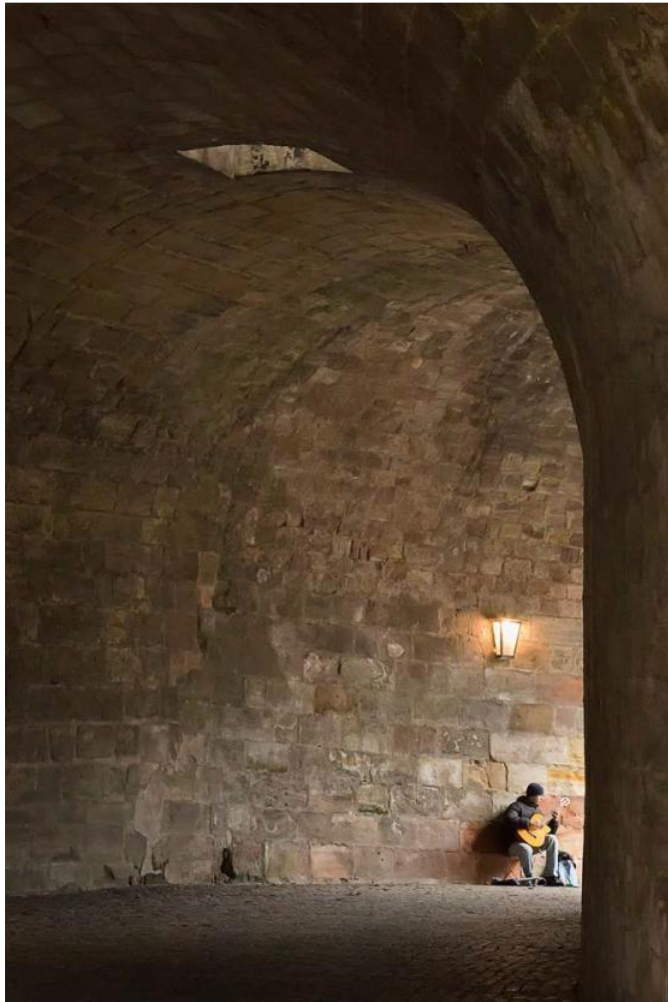

Snowy day in Bratislava

Chain Bridge, Budapest by Rob Morgan ARPS

Bratislava Castle by Rob Morgan ARPS

Nuremburg musician

The flooded Main River at Frankfurt

Melk Abbey staircase

Images
by Rob
Morgan
ARPS

Herengracht reflections, Amsterdam
by Rob Morgan ARPS